

Idaho Diversity Network Online Mentoring Resources

Collective Mentoring for Diverse Populations:
Reflections, Research, & Strategies

www.idahodiversity.org

Overview: The Idaho Diversity Network will be featuring online mentoring resources with a focus on providing professional development for faculty and students on effective strategies for mentoring students from underrepresented groups in science, technology, engineering and mathematics (STEM) and related fields.

Topics: Topics will range from discussion on importance of establishing a culture of mentorship to understanding implicit bias and the science behind effective mentoring strategies. The online resources will include webinars on demand as well as live interactive sessions featuring Idaho students, staff and faculty. An online training series will allow us to not only share expertise from our local experts, but also participate in mentor training opportunities going on throughout the country through national mentoring efforts such as the Mentor Collective and the National Research Mentoring Network.

Upcoming Opportunities: New sessions will be posted soon, however, if you have ideas for a mentoring webinar or have a session that you would like to feature, please contact Sarah Penney, Idaho NSF EPSCoR Program Manager, at sarahp@uidaho.edu.

Webinars On Demand

Mentorship In The Context of COVID-19: Why Relationships Matter More Than Ever

Supporting Today's Diverse Students: The Opportunity of Peer Mentorship

Mentorship As A Core Student Success Strategy

Ensuring Success For First-Generation Students

Digging Deeper, Doing Better: Research Science & the Messiness of Engaging Cultural Diversity

Idaho Diversity Network - Keynote Presentations

Supporting Native American Students in STEM: from Deficit to Strength

Dr. Vanessa Anthony-Stevens, University of Idaho (July 21, 2019)

Beyond Being Nice: What Science Can Help Us Uncover About Mentoring

Dr. Valerie Purdie-Vaughns, Columbia University (February 9, 2017)

♦ New sessions will be posted to www.idahodiversity.org so please stay tuned!

Idaho Diversity Network

University of Idaho

IDAHO
EPSCoR